We recognise the importance of protecting your personal information. We also believe it is important that you know how we treat the personal information we receive from you.

In dealing with your personal information, we are bound to comply with the Privacy Act 1988.

What is personal information?

In this privacy policy, “personal information” has the meaning given by the Privacy Act 1988. It means information or an opinion (whether true or not) and whether recorded in a material form or not about an individual whose identity is apparent or can be reasonably ascertained.

Why do we collect personal information?

We may need to collect your personal information if it is relevant to our business relationship with you or a service or product that we are providing, or are involved in providing, to you.

The main reasons we may need to collect your personal information are to:

- find out whether you are eligible for a financial product or service; and
- provide a financial product or service to you; and
- undertake activities in relation to the provision of a financial product or service that we are undertaking on behalf of someone else (such as the issuer of a financial product that we are arranging, if we are not the issuer); and
- process or arrange for the processing of transactions relating to a financial product; and
- verify your identity and satisfy our obligations under the Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing Act 2006; and
- assist you if you have an enquiry, problem or complaint; and
- undertake research, training, product development and marketing; and
- carry out other purposes required or authorised by law.

Do we collect sensitive information?

We do not generally collect sensitive information about individuals unless required by law.

“Sensitive information” is defined in the Privacy Act 1988 and includes information about race, political or religious beliefs, sexual preferences, criminal convictions and health information.

We do not use or share sensitive information for any purpose or disclose it to any person other than in accordance with the terms of any consent that you provide to us or where we are required or authorised by law (including under the National Privacy Principles in the Privacy Act 1988) to do so.

How do we collect personal information?

Whenever it is reasonable and practicable to do so, we collect personal information about you directly from you. Occasionally, we may receive information about you from third parties, but if we do so we will use reasonable steps to inform you of who we are, the reason we are collecting your personal information and the consequences if we do not receive that personal information.

If you contact us by phone, we may monitor or record phone calls for the purposes of:

- making a record of what was said during the phone call; and
- staff training.

Use and disclosure of personal information

We will only use your personal information for the reasons we collected it or for purposes set out in this policy.

Parties to whom we might disclose your personal information include:

- parties involved in the provision of a financial product or service to you – for example, product issuers, authorised representatives, our agents and representatives, card issuers, printers, postal services, card scheme operators (such as Visa and Mastercard), our complaints resolution scheme (if before 1 November 2018, the Financial Ombudsman Service or if on or after 1 November 2018, the Australian Financial Complaints Authority) and other suppliers of goods or services to us; and
- our and your advisers, consultants and representatives (such as lawyers, accountants, auditors, financial advisers, debt collectors, attorneys, trustees and personal representatives); and
- parties involved in card and payments systems – for example, merchants, financial institutions and payments facilitators.

In addition, personal information may be shared between other entities in the group of related companies which includes Rêv but where this occurs the principles contained in this policy will continue to apply to it. If you no longer wish to receive marketing communications from us, you should contact our Privacy Officer and we will ensure that they stop.

We may also disclose your personal information to third parties if:

- we are required by law or believe that we are required by law to disclose your personal information to a regulator or law enforcement agency in Australia or overseas – examples of regulators or agencies in Australia are the Australian Taxation Office (ATO), the Australian Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre (AUSTRAC) and the courts; or
- a crime or fraud is committed or suspected and it is in the public interest for us to disclose your personal information; or
- you have consented (either expressly or by inference from your conduct or the circumstances) to the disclosure.

We may send your personal information outside Australia unless the law says we can't, but we will only do so if we are satisfied that the recipient of your personal information has adequate data protection arrangements. Circumstances in which we might send your personal information outside Australia include if:

- you request or consent to our doing so; or
- we have a contractor overseas who needs your personal information in order to carry out the function for which they are contracted; or
- it is necessary for the purpose of a transaction.

If we send your personal information outside Australia:

- we will seek to limit it to the personal information that is required for the purpose for which the information is being sent outside Australia; and
- we will take steps to limit the recipient's authorised use of your personal information to the fulfilment of that purpose; and
- where possible, we will apply contractual or procedural safeguards to require the recipient to meet our own privacy commitments to you.

Any other use or disclosure we make of your personal information will only be as required by law or permitted by the Privacy Act 1988.
