Investing for the future

Anthony Miller, Chief Executive Officer

This year we've built momentum across the bank, delivering a solid result while investing in Westpac's transformation.

In an uncertain economic environment, we've remained focused on supporting our customers. We've improved the customer experience, grown our core businesses and maintained a strong balance sheet.

The strong growth in deposits and lending was a highlight, at 6% and 5% respectively. We've deepened customer relationships and supported businesses to invest and grow, with Business and Institutional lending increasing 12% and 18% respectively. We also increased first party mortgage origination and this remains a priority. Revenue growth was strong in Business and Institutional, and up 2% in Consumer.

We are investing in our people and technology to support future growth, while taking a disciplined approach to costs. This included hiring more bankers to support businesses, opening three new regional service centres and introducing our Community Banking Service to 14 locations, helping us to reach more than 65,000 people living in these communities.

AI is an important capability for the bank and the take-up by our people is outstanding. 95% are using AI, helping them to work more effectively and spend more time with customers. We know trust and literacy are critical. We're investing in the foundations required to scale AI responsibly, while continuing to focus on education and training for our people.

Across the year we achieved important milestones through UNITE, moving further into the implementation phase.

Supporting home ownership

Housing is one of Australia's most significant economic and social challenges and as a bank we have an important role to play.

This year we helped more than 190,000 Australians purchase a home. While the housing market slowed as buyers adjusted to rising rates and policy change, this remains consistent with previous cycles.

Supply is the most important factor in solving Australia's housing challenge. We have announced a target to facilitate $100 billion in housing related lending by 2030[1]. The focus is to support new housing supply, social and affordable housing, opportunities for renters and pathways to home ownership.

Looking ahead

In a time of global uncertainty, the Australian economy is holding up relatively well with strong business investment supporting the medium-term outlook. This is evident across our Business and Institutional customer base where demand for credit remains strong. However, inflation remains above the Reserve Bank's target range and interest rates are likely to remain elevated into 2027. This is presenting challenges for many households and businesses, although impacts are uneven across the economy. As households adjust to ongoing cost of living pressures, we remain ready to help those who need it.

We have made good progress this year and I am confident in the opportunities ahead as we simplify and transform the bank.

Balance sheet momentum[2]

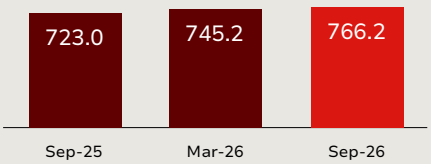

Deposits and loans grew by 6% and 5% respectively, reflecting solid deposit growth across all segments and a tilt to Business and Institutional lending.

Australian household deposits growth of 1.0x APRA system demonstrates the health of our franchise. Business and Institutional deposits increased 4% and 14% respectively, with the interest rate environment driving stronger growth in term deposits and broader macro trends resulting in increased Government and Financial Institution balances.

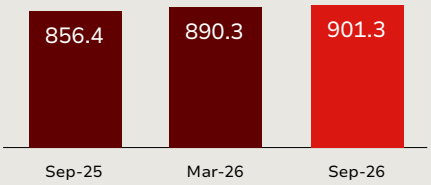

Australian housing loans, excluding RAMS[3], increased 7%, or 1.1x APRA housing system. The proportion of proprietary lending increased over the year, responding to a targeted strategy to improve performance of this channel.

In Business, lending was up 12%. This included strong loan growth in our target sectors of agriculture, health and professional services. Institutional lending increased 18%, supported by lending to existing customers and strong credit demand across sectors driving economic activity, including energy, infrastructure and resources.

Capital

The CET1 capital ratio of 12.5% is above our target ratio of 11.25%. This equates to $2.9 billion of capital above the target after payment of the 2026 final dividend.

The CET1 capital ratio decreased by 7 basis points with net profit and the sale of the RAMS loan portfolio more than offset by the payment of dividends and higher Risk Weighted Assets (RWA).

Funding and liquidity

The deposit to loan ratio was 85.5%. Higher deposit than lending growth drove a modest increase in the ratio.

The September 2026 quarterly average liquidity coverage ratio of 137% and the net stable funding ratio of 113% were both well above regulatory minimums.

The Group raised $40 billion of new long term wholesale funding.

Credit quality

Credit quality metrics were resilient as reflected in a decline in stressed exposure to TCE to 1.17%.

Given economic and geopolitical uncertainty, we applied management judgement through new overlays for energy-intensive sectors and discretionary spending. Over the year credit impairment provisions increased to $5.2 billion and the ratio of collectively assessed provisions to credit RWA was higher at 127 basis points.
